- Long Life in Specialised Applications
- Costly due to high Ni, Mo, Co & Ta Content
- Low availability compared to Stainless Steel & Carbon Steel

Applications

- Nuclear & Power Industry
- Chemical Industry
- Aerospace Industry
- Furnace Components

Stainless Steel

Stainless Steel is a group of alloys that contain minimum 10% of “Cr”. The Chromium helps regular steel to attain the “Stainless/Corrosion resistance” characteristic. Stainless Steel is further divided into groups viz. Ferritic, Martensitic, Austenitic & Duplex Steels.

Characteristics

- Better life-cycle & lower maintenance than Carbon Steel
- High Fabricability, Ductility, Weldability & Stability
- Economically viable where corrosion resistance is a must
- Easy availability compared to Nickel Alloys

Applications

- Furniture & Kitchen Industry
- Food & Beverage Industry
- Pharmaceutical Industry
- Automobile Industry
